

Statement of participation

Amanda George

has completed the free course including any mandatory tests for:

The world of the primary school

This 8 hour free course introduced the various members of a primary school community.

Issue date: 2 April 2018

www.open.edu/openlearn

This statement does not imply the award of credit points nor the conferment of a University Qualification.
This statement confirms that this free course and all mandatory tests were passed by the learner.
Please go to the course on OpenLearn for full details:
<http://www.open.edu/openlearn/education-development/the-world-the-primary-school/content-section-0>

COURSE CODE: E103_1

The world of the primary school

<http://www.open.edu/openlearn/education-development/the-world-the-primary-school/content-section-0>

Course summary

Primary education is a dynamic and exciting area to study and become involved in. This free course, The world of the primary school, introduces the various members of a primary school community, and considers the nature of their involvement and how this has evolved in the UK over recent years. It explores ideas about the primary school curriculum and the role of teachers and support staff in supporting children's learning.

Learning outcomes

By completing this course, the learner should be able to:

- understand the primary school as a community
- further consider the roles, responsibilities and experiences of the various participants in primary school life
- discuss what the wide diversity of the roles and responsibilities of its workforce tells us about the nature of primary education today
- reflect on personal experiences and ideas relating to primary education.

Completed study

The learner has completed the following:

Section 1

Primary schools today

Section 2

Teaching assistants in primary education

Section 3

Teaching assistant or assistant teacher?

Section 4

Support in action

Section 5

Looking to the future

Section 6

Conclusion